ALLARD PRAISES PRESIDENT BUSH'S MISSILE DEFENSE PLAN STRATEGIC SUBCOMMITTEE CHAIRMAN SAYS PLAN ADDRESSES FUTURE SECURITY NEEDS OF U.S.

Washington, D.C. – U.S. Senator Wayne Allard, Chairman of the Senate Armed Services Strategic Subcommittee, reacted favorably today to President Bush's speech before the National Defense University.

“President Bush recognizes that the Cold War is over but today's world remains very dangerous and unpredictable place as more nations develop nuclear, chemical and biological weapons,” Allard said. “President Bush is proposing a new strategy to deal with new threats. I support his efforts and vision to develop missile defense system that will not only protect the United States but also our allies.”
